LEWIS CALLS OFF COAL STRIKE

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7—The soft coal strike was called off today.

In a letter to members of the United Mine Workers John L. Lewis said he was ordering the miners back to work at least until March 31 so that the supreme court could be free from "public pressure superinduced by the hysteria and frenzy of an economic crisis."

The miners' boss told reporters at a suddenly-called news conference at UMW headquarters that "in addition, public necessity requires the quantitative production of coal during such period."

Lewis ordered the miners back to work immediately.

The announcement came as the supreme court was considering the government's plea for an immediate review of Lewis' and the miners' contempt case, involving $3,510,000 in fines levied by federal district court.

And in the White House, President Truman was devoting most of the day to working on his nationwide broadcast for 9:30 p. m. tomorrow, in which he promised to discuss the coal crisis.

Lewis and the union were found guilty of contempt of court last Tuesday for not heading off the crippling strike now in its 17th day. The union was fined $3,500,000 and Lewis himself $10,000.

Climaxes Legal Strokes

Lewis' announcement climaxed an epic series of legal strokes and counter-strokes that whirled with almost unprecedented speed into the supreme court.

Lewis said the union stood willing to negotiate a working agreement with the government or with the private coal operators along whatever line the court may decide in its decisions in the present litigation.

Lewis terminated the strike in a letter to all mine workers which he read to reporters. He remarked beforehand that the decision to end the strike had been his own.

Same Terms Prevail

He said the same terms and conditions that prevailed on Nov. 20, the date that he ended his contract with the government will again prevail.

Lewis, apparently in a pleasant mood, read the letter slowly to reporters.

Before he started he said he would read it himself so that the newsmen might be assured "that it is mine own, made on this day, and in good faith."

"Questions as to motive," Lewis remarked, "will be pure speculation."

"Some philosopher has said anyhow that the pursuit of motive is the most elusive in the world."

To By-Pass Appeals Court

The government obtained permission only yesterday to by-pass the court of appeals in getting a final ruling in the contempt case.

Lewis' letter said that the supreme courts powers are derived from the Constitution and the court is "the protector of American liberties and the rightful privileges of individual citizens."

"It may be presumed that the verdict of the court, when rendered, will affect the life of every citizen," he intoned.

The issues before the court, he added, are "fateful for our republic."

Combat Veteran Says Blaze Worse Than Anything in War

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA, Dec. 7—Maj. Gen. P. W. Baade, of Washington, D. C., spent 10 months on active duty with the famed 35th division, but said today that the Winecoff hotel fire here was "worse than anything over there."

At least you felt you had a chance in dodging bullets, but you're just helpless when you're trapped in a hotel room with roaring flames all around you," he said.

Mrs. Comer Rowan, hotel night telephone operator and wife of the night room clerk, said she had just gone up to her fourth floor room when the alarm was sounded. She said it was approximately 3:45 a. m.

285 Guests Estimated

She said her husband had not completed his nightly check, but estimated there were some 285 guests in the 194-room hostel. Firemen took her to safety with a ladder.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Baade were taken from their sixth floor room by firemen who ran a ladder up to their window.

The erect, gray-haired soldier and his wife said they were awakened about 3:30 a. m. by people screaming for help. He said he cracked the door to the hall slightly, but knew they had no chance of getting out that way as the corridor was full of smoke, flame and unbearable heat.

He closed and braced the door, he said, and he and his wife went to the window to wait for help

Make Dramatic Escape

One of the most dramatic escapes from the raging flames was that of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Bault of Murphy, N. C., who drew the eyes of hundreds of spectators on famed Peachtree street as they crawled on the 14th floor cornice from one room to another.

Bault, 42, said he and his wife, 36, were awakened by the flames creeping into their room. He said he stretched bed sheets from his room to that of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Phillips of Lithonia, Ga., over which the Baults crawled to the doubtful sanctuary of the Phillips' room.

Bault said he and Phillips kept the flames out of the second room by stacking the mattresses against the door and keeping them well soaked with water from the bathroom.

Awakened by Screams

Mrs. W. Y. Johnson of Eufaula, Ala., on the ninth floor said she was awakened by screaming and the heavy smell of smoke. She said she tried to call the hotel office, but got no answer, so she went to the door. When she opened the door, she said the room filled with smoke and flames, so she slammed it shut. She said the bathroom window was the only one she could get to and open. Firemen ran a ladder to the small window and she wriggled through to safety.

Bill Mobley, Atlanta, the only bellboy on duty, said he was trapped on the fifth floor when he took some ice to 510.

Hall Full of Smoke

"Everything seemed all right when I ran the elevator up to five," he said. "I wasn't in the room over two minutes, but the hall was full of smoke and flame when I tried to leave. Up to then we hadn't even smelled smoke."

Mobley explained that the hotel night engineer, a new man whose name he did not know, and he had just started to "check the house," when the call came for

Four Women Jump To Deaths As Reporter Sees Hotel Fire

By CHICK HOSCH
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA, Dec. 7—I saw four women leap to their deaths from the burning Winecoff hotel in chill pre-dawn darkness today.

I reached the inferno on famous Peachtree street in less than 45 minutes after the fire was discovered in time to see several women leap to their deaths, and others to mortal injuries.

Flames were shooting from the fourth, fifth and sixth floors and through the smoke and blazes dozens of guests could be seen clinging to the ledges or leaning from windows.

Ropes made of sheets and other bed covers hung down the sides of the building. These fragile life lines to safety were buffeted by the winds and streams of water.

Body Lands at Feet

I crossed to the hotel entrance, barely reaching the doorway when a woman's body hurtled through the marquee and landed in the street at my feet. One body could be seen draped grotesquely over the ledge of a balcony which the marquee covers.

I started up stairs, but at the second floor heard that several of the trapped were jumping from the rear of the hotel into an alley. I ran to the rear of the hotel, but tripped over something and fell sprawling. Recovering, I turned to see several bodies lying on the walk. An elderly man sobbed hysterically at the side of a woman he was trying futilely to lift.

It was too dark to get much of a picture of the scene there so I returned to the front of the building again. Several other guests, most of them women, came hurtling down into the outstretched firenets.

None Walk Away

Of the 15 or 20 that I saw jump, none walked away. They hit the nets with such force that firemen couldn't hold them in most cases, managing only to check their leap.

City detective E. B. Brooks told me of seeing one woman descend a sheet-rope three floors to an extension ladder hoisted by firemen. As we stood talking, we watched a woman back over the ledge of a ninth floor window and start down a rope of twisted bed clothing.

Between floors she lost her footing against the water drenched building and her body started swaying and slowly turning in the light of flames lapping at her feet. We watched as she turned loose and hurtled down, flat against the walls, screaming.

Her body hit the marquee.

"God," muttered Brooks, "I knew she couldn't clear that marquee.

Frantic fear seemed to catch the trapped at that point and as fast as firemen could clear the net of a broken body, another would smash into it. A moanful, piercing wail pierced the descent of those who jumped, tapering off like the eerie scream of a shell disappearing into the distance.

It chilled you to the depths of your soul. It left you sickened and weary.

NATION GIRDS FOR JOB CUTS

Trickle of Fuel Increases as Unemployment Figures Jump.

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 7 — The nation's industry today braced itself for further unemployment inroads from the coal strike amid reports the tiny trickle of fuel coming from the pits was increasing slightly in West Virginia and Pennsylvania—the two biggest bituminous coal states.

With more than 290,000 workers idle, in addition to 400,000 miners, new and sharper setbacks were predicted on every hand as a result of the added freight man. Total strike idle of 5,000,000 was forecast by year's end if the shutdown last that long.

In West Virginia, where 102,000 soft coal diggers normally work, Jesse V. Sullivan, secretary of the West Virginia Coal association, declared "daily increasingly defiant" miners have returned to work at scattered operations, "seemingly fearless" of possible union retaliation.

The operators' spokesman said national production reached 2,000,000 tons for the week ended Nov. 3 as compared with the

Courthouse Hours Cut To Save Coal

Beginning Monday offices in the Marion county courthouse will close at 4 p. m. daily and will be closed all day on Saturdays, due to a shortage of coal.

Action to reduce working hours at the courthouse was taken this morning at a meeting of all county officials after they were told the courthouse has only a 10-day supply of coal. If the coal strike continues, the county offices also will be closed the two days after Christmas, Dec. 26 and 27.

County commissioners said today they have about 20 tons of coal on hand, enough to heat the courthouse about 10 days. They said by reducing office hours a half hour during the week and cutting out the half day schedule on Saturadys they would be able to keep the building open a while longer.

Other county institutions, including the county home, the children's home and the detention home, report coal supplies sufficient to last for several weeks.

ANOTHER 100 HURT IN ATLANTA BLAZE

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA, Dec. 7—A mysterious pre-dawn fire which started in the upper floors today turned the 15-story Winecoff hotel in downtown Atlanta into a roaring inferno killing at least 120 persons and injuring another 100.

Several hours after the fire was brought under control at 7 a. m., firemen said they believed all bodies had been removed from the 194-room building located on Atlanta's famed Peachtree street in the heart of the theater district.

There were indications the death toll among the 285 guests might mount with a complete check of the emergency mortuaries established in various parts of the city. Already the toll was the worst in a hotel disaster in the nation's history.

Many Leap To Their Deaths

Many of the guests leaped to their deaths from the flaming structure. Others were burned fatally or suffocated. A check of the building showed many rooms untouched by the flames, but others were charred. Firemen expressed belief many lives would have been saved had guests remained in these untouched rooms.

Most of the guests were trapped above the third floor where the fire was believed to have started about 3:15 a. m. The brick and concrete building was constructed in 1913. It had no outside fire escapes. It was classed as fire resistant.

The flames were brought under control at 7 a. m.

W. H. Rogers, a fireman, told of finding 16 bodies on one upper floor. The rooms in which they were found were undamaged by the flames, and all apparently had died of suffocation. In one room were the bodies of five young girls, in another a woman and three children.

Emergency Morgues Set up

Emergency mortuaries were set up in various parts of the city, and a count of the dead was difficult. The municipal morgue at Grady hospital reported it had 34 bodies and could take no more.

With the flames under control, firemen kept up a steady procession bringing the dead and injured from the building. Bodies from the upper floors were removed via a bridge which was built across an alley-way to an adjoining building.

The Red Cross set up a special disaster staff headquarters for identification of the dead, but an official said obtaining names would be difficult because most of the bodies were in night clothes and many were burned or mutilated beyond recognition.

Police Chief M. A. Hornsby said "at least 25 or 30 persons were killed by leaping from windows."

Started at 3:15 A. M.

The fire apparently started between the fourth and sixth floors of the concrete and brick structure about 3:15 a. m. Police Captain L. J. Carroll said he reached the hotel shortly after that hour and upon entering the building found all elevators stalled.

With his partner, N. W. Smith, he said he fought his way by the stairs as far as the seventh floor, kicking out doors and arousing guests. On the seventh floor they found a Negro maid badly burned.

Smith told of breaking into one room and finding it ablaze.

"There was a woman inside," he said. "I dragged her out."

Other Stories Told

From the guests came other stories of the stark terror that swept them when the flames and smoke engulfed the building.

F. A. Herring, the hotel auditor, said he awoke in his room on the third floor at about 3:30 a. m.

"I never saw anything like it," he said. "Bodies were hurtling down past my window. My wife and I covered our heads with blankets and turned on the fans."

Herring said he believed the blaze originated on the fourth or fifth floors.

Nelson Thatch, chief room clerk, who lives on the sixth floor, told of pleading futilely with a woman on the fifth floor not to jump. However, he said, he later saw her throw herself from the ledge apparently to her death in a dark alley below.

Saw Others Jump

Thatch related that he saw "many others" jump also into the recesses between the buildings. He suffered a badly burned hand.

Bill Mobley, the only bell boy on duty at the time the fire started, said he took up to the fifth floor. When he left the elevator there was no sign of a fire. He said he turned to find smoke pouring out when he reached the sixth. It was filled with smoke, shadowy outlined by [illegible]

Worst Hotel Fire In Nation's History

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, Dec. 7—The fire in Atlanta, Ga., was the worst hotel fire in the nation's history from the standpoint of loss of life, Horatio Bond, chief engineer of the National Fire Protection association, said today.

When informed that more than 100 persons had perished in the Atlanta blaze, Bond said records in his office showed the previous greatest toll was 71 in the Newhall House fire at Milwaukee in 1883.

Girl Elevator Operator Gives First Word of Fire

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA, Dec. 7—Comer L. Rowan, night clerk at the Winecoff hotel said he first learned of the blaze at about 3:40 a. m. from a Negro girl elevator operator.

"When she told me of the fire," Rowan said, "I sent her to find the bellboy who was making a routine floor check, and asked her to aid him in arousing the guests.

"I myself ran to the switchboard and began phoning the rooms, warning the guests of the fire. I couldn't say much to each guest—time was short with me—but I told them I talked to to get to safety and to be certain to close the doors to their rooms to help a draft from spreading the flames."

Rowan said about 280 guests were registered and that this registration was near capacity.

Between Season Repairs Is Essential for House Preservation

YOUR HOME TODAY and TOMORROW

by W. Wadsworth Wood

Suggestions on Between Season Repairs

Every year the householder has a month or two between seasons which permit small minor repairs around his establishment.

One of the major items in suburban house maintenance consists of taking care of leaders or down spouts, gutters and flashings. As a general thing these items are made of metal if they are made of copper or brass, they require no attention whatever but if they are made of iron, tin or galvanized metal they do require painting. It is a fact that in one day the average householder can scrape and sandpaper, and paint all of the leaders, gutters and flashings in the average small home. A good coat of paint over a well prepared surface should last and be good for three or four years.

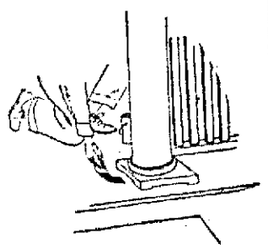
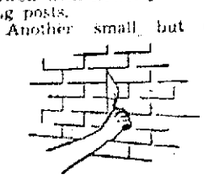
Another item of particular importance will be porch columns. These tend to rot around the base, and the base of every porch column should be painted at least every two years. The paint should be heavy so as to fill the crevice between the base of the column and the porch floor. The same procedure should be followed with newel-posts and railing posts.



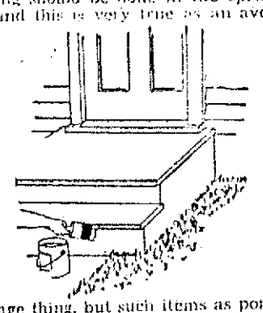
Another small but essential item will be the roof shingles. Wherever a roof shingle has curled or lifted, it should be nailed at the corner with one flat-head nail. Where a shingle has split and both edges curled, it should be nailed down flat.



During the winter months all cracks or defects in stucco and all defects in masonry walls make themselves very evident because cold weather contracts the material. The correct repair for cracks in stucco surfaces consists of a paste-like mixture of sand and cement which should be worked into the crack until it is thoroughly filled and all excess material wiped off.

Cracks in stucco should not be cut out as this procedure only increases the size of the failure. Defective joints in masonry should be pointed up with the same mixture of sand and cement, but where a brick or stone wall shows a general over-all weakness, the entire wall should be painted with a good colorless, penetrating, water-proofing compound.

Most people believe that painting should be done in the spring, and this is very true as an average thing, but such items as porch steps, if they are of wood, and wood platforms, should receive a coat of heavy paint in the fall so that they will be protected against the winter weather. This can be followed in the spring by a light coat of paint.



Mortgage Financing Lower in September

Mortgage financing activity in the nation during September declined 7 per cent from the previous monthly peak reached in August, the Federal Home Loan Bank administration reported. However, the total of $929,000,000 of non-farm mortgages recorded represented a rise of 50 per cent over September, 1945.

With the exception of insurance companies, which registered a 2 per cent increase, all types of lenders experienced a decline in volume from August to September. Compared with September of last year, mutual savings banks, commercial banks and insurance companies reported a rise in September of more than 160 per cent.

For the first nine months of 1946, mortgage financing activity totalled about $7,700,000,000—93 per cent higher than for the same period of 1945.

FIRST AID TO AILING HOUSE

—By ROGER C. WHITMAN—

Must Build His Own Home

Q: I am forced to build my own home, doing the work myself because of my financial condition, etc. Although I don't know too much about such work, being a machinist I feel that with the proper books I should be able to build the house. What books would you recommend?

A: "Building or Buying a House," by B. K. Johnstone, and published by Whittlesey House, 330 West 42nd street, New York, should give you some helpful information on contracts, cost analysis, planning, etc. Books on carpentry, masonry and allied subjects applying to construction, are published by Theodore Audel and Co., 49 West 23rd street, New York. Ask them to send you their catalog. You will probably find other useful books on the shelves of your public library. If you have any carpenters, plumbers, masons, or electricians among your friends, I advise you seek their help whenever possible to do so. You may make costly mistakes by going it entirely alone.

Asphalt Tile Floor

Q: We had an asphalt tile floor laid in our kitchen, but the color does not please us. We were unable to buy anything but black and dark tan squares, checker effect. The black part of the tile shows every dusty footprint. Could we make a satisfactory paint job in a stippled effect?

A: I am sorry, but asphalt tile should never be painted, shellacked or varnished. About all you can do is to keep it neat looking with a non-rubbing wax (paste wax is not to be used on that type of floor covering). If you do not object to scatter rugs in the kitchen, you might consider using them.

States Allot Mililons For Emergency Housing

CHICAGO—Five states have made multi-million dollar appropriations for this year for emergency housing, the National Association of Housing Officials announced.

A special session of the New Jersey legislature appropriated $6,000,000 for immediate operations and provided a $35,000,000 bond issue for approval by the electorate.

New York earmarked $35,000,000 last spring for housing, and recently added $30,000,000 for low-rent slum clearance projects. Connecticut appropriated $5,000,000 to match equal local expenditures. California set aside $10,000,000 for housing aid to cities, and Ohio appropriated $6,000,000 for allocation to counties.

Rural Safety Group Meets in Bucyrus

BUCYRUS, Dec. 7—W. E. Stuckey of Columbus, farm safety specialist, addressed members of the Crawford county, rural safety committee at its regular meeting at the court house Wednesday night when committees were reorganized and safety plans for the winter were laid.

All officers for last year were reelected, John Baker, soil conservationist, being retained as chairman. R. O. Deacon, vocational agriculture teacher, was again named co-chairman and Mrs. Ellen Kightlinger, secretary-treasurer.

Projects planned for the year will include a quarterly survey of farm accidents, an exhibit on farm safety at the county fair and other educational safety promotion work.

"Day that Will Live in Infamy" Lives Again at Pearl Harbor

By The Associated Press

PEARL HARBOR D... — The day that will live in infamy lives again at breakfast today.

Five years ago the first flash from Hickam Field announced the Japanese came over in a surprise attack and ushered in a day—then the last bomber was shot down the Rising Sun vanished below the horizon.

Today at 7:55 a.m. the hour when the first bomb fell the same sharp note of the organized bugle sounded and taps of the day of infamy will be played by the band at the same Army Air Base.

Soldiers and civilians who came through the hail of bombs and machine gun fire and survived Hickam Field will proudly see massed troops pass by.

Generals To Speak

There will be speeches by Gen. Ira Eaker, Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Lt. Gen. John E. Hull commanding general of the Pacific and Brig. Gen. John G. W... commanding the Hawaiian area.

At the end of the ceremony there will be a moment of silence, then taps—and that will be all.

There will be solemn high mass at the Cathedral of Our Lady of Peace.

The flag will be ... from sunrise to sunset, at the order of Gen. ... at the order of General Ca...

As one officer put it: The navy has no forget-me-not—not remember Pearl Harbor.

YOUR HEALTH

By HERMAN BUNDESEN, M.D.

Rheumatic Headache

THE causes of headache are legion but all of those things—disease, shock, fever, and high blood pressure—produce headache by causing the arteries and sensitive blood vessels within the skull to become inflamed or distended. There are, however, certain headaches which result from disturbances in the coverings of the outside of the head.

One variety of this disorder of the tissues of the scalp is known as rheumatic headache. The pain it sets up causes it to throb and seems to be made worse by movements of the head. The patient often has trouble describing the aching sensation and often feels that a wash of cold water on the scalp may make the pain worse.

The typical headache may be felt in tender spots often can be felt in the scalp, but the pain may also be felt under the skin. This disorder is thought to be due to inflammation of the fibrous connecting tissues. Often inflammation of these tissues or of the muscles in the shoulders, neck between the shoulder blades or along the outer part of the spine may also be present. Many times too the patient will have a history of some chronic infection, such as may be present in the nose, throat, teeth and tonsils.

The headaches generally are not severe. Sometimes the patient describes the sensation as a feeling of pressure or tightness in the scalp. Occasionally the pain may be stiff. Often the patient feels relief by applying pressure with the hands. As a general rule simple headache remedies such as spirits do not give relief.

According to Dr. Samuel Kahn of South Africa most of the sufferers are relieved by the application of heat and a hot water bottle covered by massage of the tender spot. This is done twice a day for several days. In some cases the massage may be a painful procedure but it can be carried out.

If this treatment does not bring relief it is suggested that injections of local anesthetics be given into the tender area. A local anesthetic is a substance which deadens sensation in a restricted area. This treatment is said to bring complete and prompt relief from the disturbance. Following the injections the head is put through a full range of movements. After the effects of the anesthetic wear off freedom from pain still remains.

Still Remembering Pearl Harbor

THE Japanese, our former enemies, are learning the square dance. They, think Americans are wonderful. Americans are saying the Japs aren't so bad when you get to know them and are suddenly aware of the advantage of having at least one friend in the Pacific. It makes a lovely picture, almost as touching as a backdrop for "Poor Butterfly."

Remembering Pearl Harbor on the fifth anniversary of the "day that will live in infamy" is no longer a matter of wreaking vengeance on people we now feel sure were misled into the war. Like the Huns who reformed after World War I, the Japs now are trustworthy and will never let it happen again. All future intentions, they say, are blameless.

But Americans are still remembering Pearl Harbor for other reasons than the infamy of Japan. They are remembering it as the tragic climax of the most flagrant filmflam ever perpetrated against the American public—filmflam in exceedingly high quarters of government, including the White House, the cabinet and perhaps some of the highest of military, naval and judicial personnel. The full story still waits to be told, and until it is told Pearl Harbor is going to be remembered as a demonstration of the way a powerful nation may become so confused about its own purposes and resources that it almost can lose a war by default.

Labor's Abuse of the Veto

SINCE the end of World War II organized labor in this country has vetoed every important proposal for industrial and financial stability.

If there are still labor leaders who do not understand what has caused the criticism they are hearing, they can make a comparison with abuse of the veto power in international relations.

Organized labor in the United States, like the Soviet Union in the United Nations, has refused to give its assent to some of the highest and fondest hopes of this generation.

If its arbitrary exercise of power has put it at odds with the rest of society, to the extent that it begins to have the sensation of persecution, union leadership needs only to consider that the same kind of thing has been sowing the seeds of discord in international relations.

There is the same kind of resentment against the labor movement's dissent to everything which originates elsewhere as there is against the Moscow policy of vetoing all non-Russian propositions. It is a kind of obstructionism threatening to shatter all hopes of cooperative security.

Before the end of the war it was the consensus of economic experts that the United States should and could avert inflation at home and minimize inflation abroad by converting itself to maximum production of things which had not been made during wartime.

When the war ended and conversion to post-war production began to take place more rapidly than expected, it was the consensus of economic experts that a period of high employment, high wages and high production was at hand.

But the labor unions vetoed that. Their leaders had other plans. They wanted even higher wages. At the same time, they wanted lower production. What happened is history.

Production has lagged. Strikes, slowdowns and labor-inspired interference have perpetuated shortages that should have disappeared by this time. Costs of production and prices of things produced have soared.

Before the November election, observing a kind of truce, labor leaders let their men work for a month or so with minimum interference; it was bad politics to be in trouble just before election day. But even then, with the illusion that the union executives had reformed, the power of their veto still hung over every prospect of industrial production. It was widely predicted that as soon as election was over the labor bosses would be busy with a new wave of strikes.

The first of these strikes is now in progress. John Lewis has vetoed all proposed arrangements for furnishing the nation with coal. Other labor leaders in other industries are said to be waiting their turn to veto all proposals for furnishing the nation with other commodities. Unless these gentlemen are like the Russian diplomats, who don't care what people think about them for their abuse of the veto, they must have occasional moments of wondering why everybody seems to be out of step but them.

Did You Know?

The U. S. Labor Department estimates that 900,000 people moved from the U. S South to the North and West from 1940 to 1945.

Per capita income in the South rose from 53 per cent of the U. S. average in 1929 to 69 per cent in 1945.

Chicago became an important center for people of Japanese ancestry during and after World War II.

Plant collections in Latin America must obtain permits from the government of countries in which they work.

The climate on Easter Island in the Pacific is healthful but the soil's fertility has been destroyed by volcanoes. The only water is found in craters and that is brackish and shell fish are the only obtainable marine food.

The Anglo-American Merger

By RAYMOND MOLEY

Unity in Germany Seen as Russian Need.

WHEN the Potsdam agreement was made, 16 months ago, the author of this column sought the opinion of an economist intimately familiar with Germany and respected throughout Europe. He said the agreement could not work out.

His opinion has now been justified by the facts. Potsdam has failed.

The same expert says, this week that the new Anglo-American agreement has a good chance to work and, what is more, that it is likely to bring Russia to a satisfactory solution of the German problem. For the Russian zone desperately needs union with the Anglo-American zones. As the industry of western Germany develops, the Russian need for its products will increase.

The Russian zone is mainly agricultural, with only one big industrial center—the Berlin area. It has some lignite, or brown coal, but the amount is not sufficient for the 25,000,000 inhabitants of the Russian zone. The Russians have rather stupidly removed much industrial equipment which they have been unable to use profitably and which has sharpened their dependence on outside help. That outside help must come, to a great extent, from the American and British zones.

Population Small.

The French zone is primarily agricultural, with small cities and not over 6,000,000 inhabitants. This area will be almost self-sufficient. Exploitation of the resources of the Saar Basin should enable the French to supply any necessary help without economic loss.

The American zone is mainly agricultural, with about 18,000,000 inhabitants. Its southern portion is self-supporting. Its industrial areas, Frankfurt and Mannheim-Ludwigshafen, contain the bulk of the German chemical industry and most of the machine tool plants. It is officially estimated that the American zone will need outside help to the extent of $200,000,000 for the first year and half that for two more years.

The greatest problem is the British zone. Its center is the greatest industrial area of Europe, the Ruhr Basin. In normal times, it lived by selling coal, iron, chemicals and finished products to the rest of Germany, with a comfortable margin for export. Much of this industrial plant has been dismantled as a war potential. The area desperately needs food, which will cost $250,000,000 annually for two years, and, half that, for two years more.

Effect of Merger.

The merger of the British and American zones will go a long way toward reestablishment of German self-sufficiency. But expert opinion indicates that official claims, that in three years two-thirds of Germany will be self-sufficient, are too optimistic. It is still true that all Germany will require two or three billion dollars in inverse reparations and that most of this the United States will have to bear. Payments may have to be made for seven or eight years.

The Anglo-American merger makes our economic position in dealing with the Russians much stronger than before. The Russians will soon seek some agreement with the British and Americans. But the radical land reforms, which the Russians have performed in eastern Germany, will make merger difficult. Also, German currency and banking problems must be settled so that the same monetary unit which prevails within the British-American zones will be valid and exchangeable in the Russian zone.

These differences can be settled after not too long a delay. There is no reason why Russia should not follow the example of the two great powers by merging its zone and thus improving the economic basis for future reparations.

Just a Minute

Mink-marked Bunny Is Now Marked-down

Fur prices continue to decline, a situation which surprises many.

This winter's weather has been most unseasonal. But who had expected August fur sales in December?

Of course sales of the most expensive furs have long been on the downgrade. With royalty on the wane and embezzlers on the run, there's just no more ready market for ermine.

The price of mink coats is at a longtime low. Fore-sighted playboys will lay in a supply while the price is right.

It's all a matter of supply and demand, explain economists. John L. Lewis is the only fur-bearing animal who isn't producing.

Incidentally, only the feminine mind understands the complicated system of nomenclature whereunder fifteen different furs rise or fall with the rabbit crop.

Soon, if the trend continues, one may expect to find chinchilla coats in the bargain basement . . . limit two to a customer.

Presidential Succession

By WALTER LIPPMANN

I AM printing a letter which came to me recently from Mr. Lucius Wilmerding, jr., of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton. It deals with an aspect of the general problem of the presidential succession which is becoming increasingly important for us all to think about.

Mr. Wilmerding writes as follows.

"It is interesting to inquire what the founding fathers would themselves have thought of the proposal for an intermediate election if the present case had hypothetically been presented to them. I think they would not have concerned themselves much with any argument drawn from the results of the recent election. They expected the president and the congress to be occasionally at political odds, and their whole care was to strengthen the former against a tendency to usurpation in the latter. "It is essential," said Madison, that the appointment of the executive should either be drawn from some source, or held by some tenure, that will give him a free agency with regard to the Legislature.' What these truly wise men would have thought if they had behind them our own very unfortunate experience with governmental deadlocks, is a question which I shall not attempt to answer.

Voted for Two

"Passing over this point, I would now observe that the founding fathers were very much concerned with the selection of a proper character for the vice presidency. The office indeed was insignificant — almost the only one in the world, said John Adams, in which firmness and patience are useless, but the mode provided for filling it was such as to give some reasonable expectation that the person chosen would be a "continental character.'

The electors were not allowed to designate the candidates—such a one for president, such another one for vice president—but were made to vote each for two persons as president, leaving it more or less to chance which would be president and which vice president. Each elector, it was thought, would select two characters suitable for the presidency; the one highest in the vote would be president, the one second vice-president; both offices would be filled with men of presidential caliber or, at any rate, with men in whom the people repose the highest trust.

"But in 1800 this system broke down by reason of the electors discriminating in their minds which of the two persons voted for should be president and which vice-president; and in 1804 an amendment to the Constitution was adopted changing the whole spirit of the electoral system by the introduction of the designating principle. The effect of this innovation—the object of which was perhaps to improve the mode of selection than to provide against the choice of a Federalist vice-president in 1804—is well known.

"It is not so well known that all the evils which have happened were accurately foreseen at the time. Here, for example, is a prophecy by Senator Plumer. 'The vice president * * * will no longer be voted for as president of the United States, but as president of the Senate—he will be elected to preside over forms in this house. He will have less dignity and be less respectable. This will be the unavoidable consequence of the change. In electing a subordinate officer men do not, they will not, seek for, or require, those qualifications, which they deem requisite for SUPREME command.' (William Plumer's Memorandum of Proceedings in the United States Senate 1803-1807, P. 64.)

"The opportunity for political chicanery was much insisted on. Under the designated plan, the attention of the public would be wholly centered on the contest for the presidency, the vice presidency would either be left to chance or prostituted to the basest purposes; 'Character, talent, virtue and merit, will not be sought after in the candidate. The question will not be asked, is he capable? Is he honest? But can he by his name, by his connections, by his wealth, by his intrigues, best promote the election of a president?' (Annals, Eighth Congress, first session, Col. 144). In short the new mode would expose the people to the selection of a less important and more unfit person than the constitutional provision.

"Bearing all this in mind, I think it is safe to say that IF the members of the Federal Convention had happened to prescribe the mode of voting for the presidency and vice presidency which is now the rule, they would at the same time have provided for intermediate election in the event of the president's death or resignation.

Limit on Occupancy

"They would have done this, not to avoid a government deadlock, but because the same considerations would have weighed with them as weighed with the authors of the act of 1792 when they provided for a special election in the event of the succession passing to the president pro tem of the Senate or to the speaker of the House. A man who has not been voted on for the presidency ought not to hold the office for longer than it takes to choose a new president. Indeed the argument applies even more forcibly to the vice president than to the president PRO-TEM of the Senate of the speaker, since these have in point of fact been elected for office by the members of some constituency, while the vice president has in truth been elected by no one. He rides into office on the coattails of the president."

"Every thought, well-rounded, becomes a sphere of influence."
—P. K. Thomajan.

THE HOUSE THAT ISN'T THERE

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Monday, Dec 7, 1936.

Wallis Warfield Simpson and King Edward of England talked by trans-channel telephone several times. The American divorcee was in deepest seclusion at Villa Lou Viel, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers of New York, at Cannes, France.

Curtis G. Harriman, 80, a Marion man who for a decade was a prominent figure on Wall Street and whose ancestors were among the early settlers of Marion county died at the home of his sister, Mrs L. E. Redman on West Columbia street.

Miss Isabel Stump was installed as worthy matron and Harold Hall as worthy patron at a meeting of Lydia Chapter No. 83, Order of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Millie Tschanen was installed as treasurer for the thirty-second year.

Mrs. Fred Johnston spoke to the Marion Council of Jewish Women at a luncheon meeting at Hotel Harding on the effect of the possible abdication of King Edward on the Palestinian mandate in which England promised protection to Palestine. Should the king, much more democratic than his brother, abdicate in favor of the Duke of York, Jewish people concerned under the mandate would be in far worse position than at that time, Mrs. Johnston stated. The mandate came at the close of World War I when England promised that if she took Palestine she would become its protector.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Tuesday, Dec 7, 1926.

George W. Johnson, 47, died at his home on East George street of injuries suffered two months previously while he was employed in the railroad yards here.

Announcement was made that sale of reserved seats for the annual charity minstrels of Marion Lodge of Elks to be staged under the direction of Charles Gano of Marion would start Thursday at the Grand theater box office.

Thirty-five couples attended a dance of the Jolly Dancing club at Schwinger's annex with music furnished by Murray's Entertainers. The committee in charge included Leo Stoner, Willard Ginder, Earl Greenland, Ralph Bowers and Gloyd Lattimore.

The Steam Shovel basketball team was defeated by the Ohio Wesleyan university team 44-33, in the first game of the season in the new Shovel gym. In the Marion lineup were Bohyer, Ward, Worden, Pough, Bacon, Irvin and Compton.

The Plan That Miscarried

By JOSEPH and STEWART ALSOP

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7—At this stage of the proceedings it has become abundantly clear that John L. Lewis led his men into the coal strike on the basis of a grave miscalculation. It is now definitely known, in fact, that Mr. Lewis expected the President to quail as usual before the terrible spectacle of the terrible miners' leader in one of his terrible rages, and to hasten as usual to offer appeasement. Moreover, Mr. Lewis had every reason for this expectation, in view of the continued presence in the White House of Dr. John R. Steelman. In the simplest terms, Dr. Steelman's role was to be that of the boy in the children's game who quietly kneels behind one friend so that another friend can push him over.

Unfortunately, the intended victim was aroused to his peril, as sometimes happens even when this game is played among the naturally cruel young. In this instance, the warnings to the President came from Secretary of the Interio, Julius A. Krug and the White House counsel, Captain Clark Clifford. By their advice, the President obstinately refused to let himself be pushed over. This upset all the Lewis calculations, and induced something nearer to a genuine mood of consternation than John L. Lewis has experienced in many a long year.

It is of course known that Mr. Lewis began to search for some way out as soon as he learned that the President would stand firm. What has not been disclosed is the note of frenzy which occasionally characterized this search. During the past ten days, any reasonably eminent man, no matter how distant his connection with the problem, had a good chance of being asked to intervene.

Efforts Toward Peace

David Sarnoff, of the Radio Corporation of America, was requested, for example, to serve as a sort of arbitrator. Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal was approached to act as the architect of peace. The man who makes the President laugh, George Allan, was induced to add his persuasive talents to those of Dr. Steelman, but succeeded only in producing a tentative settlement which Mr. Lewis rejected because the government would not withdraw its suit. All this was of course additional to the efforts of the coal operators themselves and of the Cleveland railroad magnate, Cyrus Eaton, whom Mr. Lewis appears to have placed under a sort of spell.

All this scurrying, telephoning and frantic negotiating clearly meant that behind his superb facade, Mr. Lewis was appalled by the President's continued firmness. Why then did he take the risk of embarking on this strike, when only a few months before he had declared his contract the best he had ever signed?

Here again, the answer must be speculative, but as given by those qualified to speak, it seems to be pretty convincing. First, of course, there was Mr. Lewis' desire to do in the CIO.

If he could count (as he did count) on getting the President to appease him again, the strike was an excellent maneuver in his war against the CIO. His detested enemy, Philip Murray, and the other CIO leaders would be forced at once to try to match Mr Lewis' success. Furthermore, the chief sufferer from the anti-labor hysteria aroused by the coal strike would not be the United Mine Workers or the A F L, which Mr. Lewis now in effect leads. It would be the CIO. The CIO abided broadly during the war by the anti-strike pledge, where Mr. Lewis did not.

Mr. Lewis has engineered strikes since the war just as the CIO leaders have. Yet it is the CIO rather than Mr. Lewis that congress chiefly hates.

Second, there is the simple fact that from time to time Mr Lewis feels a natural compulsion to give his magnificent ego a run in the yard. In this connection, one of your correspondents vividly recalls the experience of an interview with the miners' leader a year ago.

As his custom is, Mr. Lewis placed his interviewer on one of the inordinately low leather chairs which are grouped here and there in his depot-sized office. He himself took up a position on the broad, elevated hearth of the huge fireplace, upon which he paced up and down as though it were a dais. And from this eminence, with almost no interruption for over an hour, he put on a performance worthy of Booth, MacReady, Sarah Bernhardt and Duse, all rolled into one.

By turns he was tragic, dramatic, serious, ironic, comic, sardonic, wise, analytical, impassioned, hortatory, visionary and calmly shrewd. Every thought was expressed in the salty and splendidly forceful language which makes him beyond compare the best user of English in American public life. No matter how obviously calculated the gestures of the hands and the play of the eyebrows, every motion carried the conviction that only a great actor can convey. It was spell-binding. And while one savored this extraordinary performance from, so to speak, to lowly depths of the front row, one felt that the great actor on his dais was deeply enjoying it also.

From the hearth of an office to the national stage is a long way. But if the President had followed the script written for him by Mr. Lewis and Dr. Steelman, John Lewis would have been enabled to give the same kind of performance in the past two weeks as he did a year ago—and with an immeasurably larger and more emotional audience.

My Youth

I found one day I knew him not
His boyish face I'd quite forgot.
I tried but could not recognize
Those eager, laughing, childish eyes

I thought, "Could I have known this kid?
He seemed to say, "Perhaps you did."
His carefree, naive, awkward ways
A memoir of my yesterdays.

I passed him on the street and smiled
Because I liked this stranger child
But he so quickly hurried by
I didn't know that it was I.

Pick of the Crop

By TRUMAN TWILL

This is the time of year when associations with laurels to bestow look over the panel of candidates and take their pick of the crop.

The Society for the Advancement of Things of no Importance has made its selections, herewith announced:

J. Frogburton McNinch—For Outstanding Courage in a Tight Spot. Mr. McNinch, whose feet hurt, took forthright measures to ease the pain the night of July 17 between the hours of 10 and 11.30 at a soiree in a fashionable neighborhood. "I don't care whether I have a hole in my sock or not," he said grimly. "I am going to take off my shoes and be as comfortable as the ladies present, most of whom—I have noticed—already have kicked off their brogans." Our congratulations to Mr. McNinch and this token of our esteem.

La Paul von Smith III—For Seeing His Duty and Doing It. Late one afternoon last May Mr. von Smith III, while giving his name on the telephone and getting more involved by the minute said: "Skip it, Buster. Forget everything I've told you. This thing has been a thorn in my side since the first grade. From now on it's Paul—P-a-u-l—Smith—S-m-i-t-h. There! I feel better. I think everybody will feel better. Our best wishes to Paul Smith and this platinum plaque for his pioneering work in the simplification of flossed-up names.

Mrs. Morgan St. Hassaproot (nee Mary Jones)—For Knowing Her Own Mind. During a social gathering on the night of Aug. 18, when guests were sniffing and sneering at radio entertainers and tearing their Crossley ratings apart, Mrs. St. Hassaproot spit neatly in another lady's eye and said: "I have had my bellyful of your kind of sniping by a bunch of hens, also roosters who couldn't keep the air occupied for a 1 second station break if their lives depended on it. When you frustrated Fred Allens are fired of this character assassination, call me and I will rejoin you. I will now step into the kitchen for some more ice." And she did, and for that we salute her and present her with a set of memorial ear muffs.

Frelinghuysen V. Pushbutton—For Protecting His Own Sanity, Mr. Pushbutton, a man of excitable temperament and wretched digestion, reached the conclusion on Nov. 23 that circumstances beyond his control were aging him prematurely and addressed his family as follows: "Family. Hear this. Papa has taken all he can bear from despots in democratic clothing, goosers, pushers, foreign agitators, dogs that bay all night and clucks that cluck all day. He is going to go down into the cellar and stay there until he can think about these things without wanting to fly to pieces. He does not wish to be disturbed, except when someone brings him meals or wants more heat. The winters come ever since, presumably enjoying himself. In absentia, the society bestows its jigsaw puzzle prize on Frelinghuysen V. Pushbutton for daring to do what all of its members have thought about doing during 1946.

True Wisdom

A Sermonette
By REV. E. H. WIERTH
Pastor of First Evangelical and Reformed Church

Text: James 3:17, "But the wisdom that is from above . . ."

We [illegible] Mr. Worldly Wiseman boasting about in the [illegible] his wisdom, making [illegible] impressive by his assumption [illegible] superiority, by his hasty [illegible] with the ignorant and [illegible] openly disagreeable airs [illegible] scrupulous contempt. Mr. [illegible] Wiseman is clever and [illegible] himself to be clever, and [illegible] of his cleverness to be [illegible]. But this wisdom de[illegible] not from above."

[illegible] others, however, and [illegible] constitute the great majority [illegible] people, who do not take the [illegible] Worldly Wiseman de[illegible] above, but who nevertheless [illegible] just as much governed by [illegible] toward life. They are [illegible] who go about their af[illegible] steeped in self-con[illegible] only the things of the [illegible] are the ones who say, [illegible] those who just go [illegible] help themselves.

[illegible] as opposed to these the [illegible] James gives us a descrip[illegible] of a Wise man. He is [illegible] above, he is guided [illegible] by a wisdom which [illegible] exclusively of the earth, in[illegible] by a wisdom which [illegible] utterly non-earthly. [illegible] words of the apostle, [illegible] m that is from above."

[illegible] wisdom is, of course, ex[illegible] from above. It is "the fullness of time" [illegible] came. In other words when [illegible] conditions were right, af[illegible] certain earthly conditions had [illegible] fulfilled, it was then that [illegible] came. The long, religious [illegible] of the Hebrew people [illegible] a contribution to the possi[illegible] of the coming of the Mes[illegible] and without this contribu[illegible] it is doubtful whether he [illegible] have come, at least to [illegible].

We speak of the long religious [illegible] of the Hebrews as the [illegible] of God working through [illegible] and that is true—but it is [illegible] exclusively that. It is said of [illegible] again and again that they [illegible] evil in the sight of Jehovah." [illegible] other words they were also [illegible] in the unfolding drama. [illegible] could choose to do that [illegible] was right and good and [illegible] Man himself is an agent act[illegible] in the dangerous and terrific [illegible] of life. We do not eliminate [illegible] negate man's activity. There [illegible] things that he can do and [illegible] do.

Nevertheless it is equal[illegible] false [illegible] to the all wisdom was born [illegible] man and all wisdom die [illegible] man, and all wisdom is con[illegible] to man. Man is a partial [illegible] in his own right, but over [illegible] beyond that is the creation [illegible] created all things including [illegible] himself. Before man was [illegible] created the heaven and the [illegible], and on the sixth day he created man. God is the creator, this is God's world, there is a wisdom which is beyond man as well as within man. It is "the wisdom that is from above."

This wisdom is revealed to us in all the organic and inorganic world about us.

Nevertheless as for man and the way for him to live on this earth this "wisdom from above" is most fully and completely revealed to him in the life, the teaching, the death and resurrection of Jesus the Christ. Oftimes the children of men cry out and say, "How can I know this wisdom from on high?" "Where is it?" and the answer is it is revealed to men in the person of Christ. Oftimes men cry out, "Where shall I go to obtain wisdom for life and for living?" Well where shall men go? Shall they go to science? Does man's science have the answer? No real answer, for science proceeds by dissection and obstruction. But dissection is death while abstraction is a fiction.

Shall this man then go to philosophy? But neither does philosophy have answers to the basic questions. It can do no more than think man's thoughts after him and is helpless before the question, "Who made God, or what is the meaning of life? Man is by nature ignorant. What he needs above all is a revelation for his ignorance. That revelation has come to this earth in the person of Christ Jesus. In Him was life and it was the light of men. In Him is "the wisdom from beyond."

To all of which the skeptic still cries, "If only I were sure!" To which the only reply is. "You never will be sure until you follow him at the risk of safety." Those who do follow soon learn to know. They soon discover that they are befriended. Some of the old romances told how some dead hero stepped from his picture to cheer those who ardently desired him in the day of struggle. In the case of Christ that romance is fact. He seems at first only a portrait of one who lived long ago and far away; but soon, as one follows on, a pervasive light, then an influence, then a known Presence. Always those who truly follow say with another ancient follower, "I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself for me."

In going through a cavern each tourist is given a lighted candle by which he gropes his way. Such a scene is a parable of our world—each man trying to find his own way, with ever and again a frenzied cruel scramble, and on man knowing the way.

But then suddenly as they go along, one face is lighted up by a different light—not from below, but from above. That man is standing beneath a shaft of light that comes from the upper lighted world. Christ is that light for every life. To walk by our own poor candle is ignorance indeed, but to follow Him, step by step in faith, is both light and life.

Christmas is coming. It will soon be upon us. But Christmas is the Advent of that light on earth—it is the coming of "the wisdom from beyond," to earth that the children of men might be saved. May we during this advent season diligently be preparing for the coming of this wisdom.

Christmas Seal Funds Used In Marion County To Combat TB

Tuberculosis kills more young people between the ages of 15 and 35 than any other disease and frequently reaches an advanced stage before unmistakable symptoms appear, members of the Marion County Anti-Tuberculosis League, sponsors of the annual Christmas Health Seal campaign, pointed out today.

A disease which is spread from person to person becomes a matter of public concern because even one case is a potential threat to the entire community, A. C. May, campaign chairman said in discussing the county's health seal sale which got under way at Thanksgiving time.

Home Community Aided

Funds derived from the seal campaign aid materially in building Marion city and county's health record, he points out. It finances an educational program for all of the diagnostic tuberculosis clinics held in the county as well as the x-ray mobile unit service which was introduced here this year.

Since control of tuberculosis is through early diagnosis and case finding, which is done through X-ray and skin testing, the battle against the disease is a year-round program. Skin testing is done each Monday morning in the office of the county health department and this service is free to anyone wishing to be tested. Eighteen free clinics were held this year in which 20 to 35 persons were examined each time, and at the time of the visit of the mobile unit here 3,356 school children were X-rayed at a cost of $2,000. Milk and cod liver oil is provided post-sanatorium cases where families are not able to purchase this necessary builder and in some cases this has been done for as long as two years.

Early Cures Effected

Records show that many persons, particularly young people, are freed from tuberculosis when discovered in the early stages by X-ray. Early discovery in one instance where a teen-age girl was found to have primary symptoms, brought complete recovery through rest and proper diet, thus avoiding sanatorium care. As a matter of precaution she is being tested and examined at intervals by a chest specialist, whose salary is paid from the Christmas health seal returns. Another record on file in the county is that of a little girl of seven who was found to have an abcessed lung which could have caused her death. This, it was pointed out by doctors, could only have been discovered through the use of X-ray.

OHIO LABOR TO GET SECOND BIG WEEKEND

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 7—Thousands of Ohio Workers faced another long weekend today as a number of industries announced "holidays" for today and Monday in an effort to stretch dwindling coal supplies or adjust to a freight embargo by the mine shutdown.

TWO SCHOLARSHIPS SET AT OHIO STATE

By The Associated Press

LANCASTER, O., Dec. 7—Ohio State university has accepted two scholarships for graduate nurses to be trained at the Elizabeth Kenny institute, Minneapolis, Minn., it was announced today by R. Kenneth Kerr, Ohio chairman of the Sister Elizabeth Kenny foundation.

Mr. Kerr, Lancaster newspaper publisher, made public a letter from Dr. Charles A. Doan, dean of the O. S. U. college of medicine, expressing appreciation of the offer, and hope that contemplated expansion of the O. S. U. medical center would provide a location for a special hospital project which the foundation plans eventually to finance.

Each of the two scholarships will provide $3,500 for the training of an O. S. U. graduate nurse as an infantile paralysis therapy technician. Young women of superior ability, and with a definite special interest and aptitude, are to be sought and recommended, with no obligation placed upon the candidates as to the ultimate location in which they may practice.

Dr. Doan said, however, that he hoped that the O. S. U. medical center would have the services of one or more such specifically trained individuals.

The university's acceptance followed a conference Nov. 30 between the dean, Mr. Kerr, Mrs. A. B. Cohen and C. J. Farcasin of the Kenny foundation, and Miss Frances McKenna, director of the nursing school of the University hospital. Miss McKenna is to make the selections for the scholarships.

Dr. Howard L. Bevis, president of Ohio State university, is a member of the executive committee of the Sister Kenny foundation.

COAL

court review of the John L. Lewis contempt case.

At the White House President Truman worked on the speech on the coal crisis he will broadcast at 9:30 tomorrow night over all radio networks.

The President, faced with a rapidly mounting fuel shortage and industrial paralysis, made no engagements to receive any callers in order to devote his time to preparing the address. It will run at least 20 minutes, White House officials said.

With John L. Lewis' contempt conviction already in the hands of the supreme court, the government turned to President Truman today for the next move to crush the 17-day old coal strike.

White House aides hinted broadly that when the Chief Executive goes on the radio Sunday night (9:30 p. m. EST) he would make it clear to the nation that—in the it clear to the nation that—in the ...cers— there will be no turning back in this fight."

On the union side, President A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen pledged participation in a united front conference of labor leaders urged by CIO President Philip Murray to resist the legal drive on the United Mine Workers.

Murray has called on the unions to stand together against "the ferocious attack now being made upon them."

Decision Soon

The supreme court scheduled for discussion and possible decision today whether it would take immediate jurisdiction in Lewis' appeal from the contempt conviction.

If the high tribunal accepts the case and by-passes the U. S. court of appeals, it could announce this Monday and possibly set arguments for later in the week.

The government, in a petition filed a few hours after the UMW appealed the conviction to the intermediate court yesterday, based its application for speedily supreme court action on the contention that the strike is causing "irreparable damage."

Chinks in Resistance Seen

While the legal fight went on, there were indications of chinks in the union's resistance to a resumption of coal digging.

Jesse V. Sullivan, secretary of the West Virginia Coal association, declared union miners were trickling back to the pits at scattered diggings although they risked expulsion from the UMW.

There were reports of small truck mines manned by union miners reopening in eastern Kentucky.

At Durango, Colo., 40 union men reopened six small mines Thursday.

But there was no other semblance of a break in the miners' stand pat policy and the government found it necessary to slap even tighter restrictions on utility coal reserves.

Nationwide Dimout Monday

At the same time steps were taken to put the power and light dimout on a virtually nationwide basis begining Monday.

Whatever else Mr. Truman may say to the nation and the defiant miners it seems certain he will have an "or else" to back up a demand that the work stoppage cease.

FOUR FACE CHARGES IN TAXI ASSAULT

New Complaint Filed; Bonds Placed at $1,000.

Affidavits charging four men involved in a fracas at the Yellow Cab office on East Center street early Friday morning with assault and battery and assault with intent to kill were filed today in municipal court.

The complainant is James Simpkins of Clinton street, a Yellow Cab driver. The accused men are Albert J. Hogue, 22, of 136 East Mark street; George R. Bell, 25, of the Ideal hotel; William O. Redd, 24, of 120 South High street, and Charles H. Thacker, 21, of 576 Herman street. They will be arraigned in municipal court on the above charges next Wednesday morning.

The men were arraigned yesterday on charges of intoxication and disorderly conduct, to which they pleaded not guilty. Bond on each was raised today from $200 to $1,000. They are being held in county jail pending posting of bond.

They are accused of attacking Simpkins and Alfred Easterday of North Greenwood street, also a cab driver, when Easterday refused to allow them to ride in a cab with the doors open. After the altercation Easterday was taken to City hospital, where he was treated and released.

NATION

600,000 tons he asserted was being dug weekly during last spring's walkout. Normal production is 12,000,000 tons a week, he declared.

"Increasing tonnage may be the visible crack in the ... strike through which (John L.) Lewis sought to freeze the nation into submission."

Sullivan said strip tonnage in a dozen counties was reported normal and added one of the largest working mines employed about 550 men.

441 Mines Operating

The Navy coal mines administration said 441 mines were operating in Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania, employing more than 13,000 union and non-union miners and producing an estimated 185,000 tons. That output represents 15 per cent of the area's normal production. In the immediate Pittsburgh vicinity, the solid fuels administration said 44,000 tons were not being dug daily by 3,000 mines in 96 strip mines after the recent increases.

Capt. O. C. Carlson, coal mines administration head in the Pittsburgh area, said troops would be called, if necessary, to protect working miners. In Washington, the civilian production administration froze equipment—such as surplus power shovels and cranes—needed to strip mine coal and directed the war assets administration to sell only to holders of CPA certificates.

Meanwhile, unemployment was spreading with steel and iron counting a total of more than 55,000 idle, railroads reporting 66,000 furloughed, and miscellaneous industries accounting for 171,000.

Atlanta Fire Fatal To 115

women were visible in a window near the flames.

Red Cross workers set an emergency first aid station near the hotel entrance on famous Peachtree street where guests were treated for minor shock and injuries. The more seriously injured were rushed to hospitals throughout the city.

The Red Cross made a radio appeal for blood plasma.

One fireman was killed when a woman, leaping from a high window crashed upon him as he was ascending an aerial ladder.

Police Capt. L. J. Carroll and officer N. W. Smith said they had made their way through smoke-filled stairways to the seventh floor 30 minutes after the fire was discovered shortly before 4 a. m. but were driven back by the quickly-spreading flames.

Accurate Check Fails

They said they had been unable to make an accurate check of guests remaining in the burning building but had encountered no bodies in the corridors.

The origin of the fire was not immediately known, firemen said.

At 5:15 a. m. about 20 guests could still be seen through the flames as they crouched along ledges at the tenth, eleventh and twelfth floors of the stone and brick structure.

With several floors beneath them a raging, billowing mass of flames, their position appeared hopeless to firemen except for those who might leap to safety into firemens nets.

Hit by Falling Brick

J. W. Gates, Red Cross safety director, his head wrapped in a blood-stained towel, was assisting in the rescue work. He said a falling brick had struck him on the head, opening a deep gash. He continued, however, to aid firemen and police who sought to reach the trapped guests.

There was no way immediately to fix the death count. Every available ambulance in the city was doing shuttle service removing the dead and terror-stricken living.

The hotel faces on two streets and an alley, and from the fourth floor overlooks an adjoining roof.

Hopelessly trapped, the guests leaped from all sides of the burning structure, about 25 or 30 escaped by descending fire ladders to the adjacent roof.

35th Division C. O. Saved

Among them were Maj. Gen. P. W. Baade of Washington, who commanded the Thirty-Fifth Division overseas during World War II. Mrs. Baade and Capt. D. C. Waelde also escaped down ladders lifted to them by firemen. General Baade credited firemen with saving "many, many lives."

An Associated Press reporter at the fire said he reached there in time to see four women leap, one of whom apparently was killed instantly as her body crashed through the marquee.

E. B. Brooks, Atlanta detective, who was directing traffic at the scene, said one woman had escaped by making her way down an extension ladder and descended to the street.

All Flames, No Smoke

E. J. Hosch, one of The Associated Press reporters sent to the fire, said it "was all flame and no smoke—all red flames simply eating out the interior of the hotel."

Hosch said that of nine women he saw leap from the hotel's upper stories upon his arrival at the fire, six were caught in nets by firemen. Three, however missed the net and crashed to their deaths on the pavement.

At 4:40 a. m. guests were still grouped in windows of the hotel's upper rooms and were screaming and pleading for rescue.

Ambulances rushed the injured to hospitals.

The flames were dense on the Peachtree side of the structure.

Red Cross Begins Counting Fire Dead

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 7— Red Cross officials early this morning began the task of identifying the dead and injured in the disasterous Winecoff hotel fire and Clifford B. Fligg, area public information director, said it would be a "slow and confusing process."

A carload of blood plasma much of which was returned from overseas, was made available to Atlanta hospitals by the Red Cross and radio appeals have been made for blood donors. Twenty-four units of plasma immediately were sent to Marys pa' Grady hospital where most of the injured were taken.

Red Cross workers were checking hospital records for the injured and the bodies of the victims at local morgues. It was expected to take several hours to prepare the first casualty list, Fligg said.

your company at once and await further orders." It was signed by Col. Charles A. Stump, Third Battalion commander.

The men were notified over radio station WMRN, by telephone, and by the siren at the armory, which was sounded for about 40 minutes.

Officers said 56 out of 58 members of the company were present and ready to go. First notification that the mobilization was a test was given by an officer from regimental headquarters in Toledo who entered the armory about 7:30. He checked the unit's preparations.

Officers here said they received no intimation that the test had any connection with the coal crisis. The last test mobilization undergone by Company M was about two years ago, they said.

MARION MINISTER BAGS DEER ON HUNTING TRIP

Dr. Hershey and Two Other Marion Men Back from Pennsylvania.

It's deer repast at the parsonage at 150 Homer street since Dr. C. E. Hershey, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist church, returned from a hunting trip in Pennsylvania.

The data made out for the game authorities of the state read: "C. E. Hershey, 150 Homer, Marion, O.—killed deer at 4 p. m. Rayshill, 1946, in Wood township, Huntingdon County—weight 125 pounds, points, four." Rayshill is in the Allegheny mountains, near Robertsdale, Pa., and it was at the top of the mountain at a distance of 300 yards, that Dr. Hershey shot the buck, his first since he "took to" hunting the bigger game first three years ago.

Hunting Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, he shot the deer Tuesday. His gun was a 30-30 rifle. The place is near Santillo, Pa., where he was pastor before coming to Marion. He was accompanied on the expedition by Carl Ford of North Main street and Al Hough of Mary street. Neither of the other men bagged game.

Mackenzie Calls Spanish Question Hot and Delicate

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The argument in the United Nations political committee over how to deal with the Spanish case has been hot, and it has been fierce at times, but while the consensus is that the generalissimo government must go, there is no unanimity about how to get rid of it.

Hal Boyle

The debates have ranged a wide field, but so far as I have noted nobody has ventured to put his finger on the basic cause of the differences among the UN members. Yet that cause is as plain as my Aberdeen terrier's long nose.

It's the same old ideological war that has produced the two great blocs—the Russian dominated nations and the western democracies. One bloc wants to get rid of the Franco regime in such manner as will result in the establishment of a Soviet, while the other wishes to give the people of Spain a chance to have a really free election and pick their own government.

No One Knows Vote

It's all very well to sit outside Spain in the role of a prophet and guess what sort of government Spaniards want. But I was in that country only this year and don't believe there is any living person in Spain or outside it, who knows how the people would vote in a free plebiscite. They might want a return of their monarchy, or they might decide for a republic. It's a matter of pure speculation, because they haven't had a free election in more than a decade.

Of one thing your correspondent is very certain the people of Spain don't want any more civil war. The horrors of the last one are too fresh in most minds. And it's very obvious that unless the United Nations handle this highly complicated situation very carefully, civil war might be precipitated.

The United States already has hinted this danger of civil strife off coldly and has taken a stand against any UN operation which might produce such a catastrophe. Britain and most of the western democracies take a similar view. The French government, acting under very strong Communist influence, is for strong-arm tactics in getting rid of Franco.

American View Set Forth

Senator Tom Connally set forth the American viewpoint succinctly before the UN political committee the other day. He reiterated U. S. opposition to Franco and said he would welcome any democratic change in Spain which would protect basic human rights and freedoms. Uncle Sam will take part in any necessary action against the present regime, under the UN charter, if and when the regime becomes a threat to international peace and security. Pending such an eventuality America is opposed to coercive measures by the United Nations, such as severance of diplomatic relations or the imposition of economic sanctions. Britain agrees with that.

While we are on the topic of civil war it's well to note that civil war in Spain—or civil war in Greece, such as now is developing—could very easily produce another world conflict. Greece maintains that the left wing revolt within her borders is being inspired from without, which makes the situation doubly delicate, because she herself is backed by Britain and her Balkan neighbors are in the Russian fold. Civil war in Spain would produce an even more menacing position.

Chester Daly Reelected By Protected Home Circle

Chester Daly was reelected president for six months of Protected Home Circle No. 184 when annual election of officers was held at a meeting Friday night in the Democratic hall.

BEXLEY JINX PREVAILS AS HARDING BOWS 53 TO 33

Prexy Reserves Also Taste Defeat, Going Down 27-21

Coach Carlton M. Smith's Bexley Lions downed Coach Dewey N. Bohyer's Prexies 53 to 33 last night on the Bexley home court. Harding was not able to solve the defense set up by the taller, heavier Lions. Paced by Carl Johnson's 22-point scoring spree Bexley won their season's opener, handing Harding its first loss in two starts. Approximately 750 persons, very few of them Marion supporters, packed the Bexley gymnasium to witness the tilt.

Bexley Reserves won 27 to 21.

Bexley went out in front in the first quarter with Bud Susil scoring 10 points. His total was second high.

Dick Riddle, Harding substitute at all positions, was high for Marion with 8 points.

Harding trailed 19 to 8 at the end of the first quarter, rallied in the second quarter, scoring four goals and three charities to cut the Bexley lead to six points but dropped out of the running as Bexley chalked up 14 points in each remaining quarter, Harding scoring five in the third period and nine in the last.

Fields opened scoring, sinking a foul shot. Susil sent the hosts into a five point lead and Harding tallied two fouls and a goal while Bexley got a lone goal to make the score 7 to 5, Bexley got five more baskets and a free toss while Harding scored a foul and a goal, the quarter ending 18 to 8.

In the second quarter Riley, Roseberry, Coss and Zeisler combined 11 points while Bexley picked up only seven on scores by Lewis and Johnson. Bexley had a six point margin at the end of the half.

Marion had its smallest quarter in the third, Coss and Riddle scoring a goal each and Fields making his fourth charity in four tries. Lewis scored six points for the hosts in the quarter, Johnson got five, and Tarrier made three for three in fouls shots.

Bexley opened scoring in the final period, Johnson getting one from close in and Susil sinking a foul shot. Riddle was the first scorer for the Presidents and went on to sink one more goal and two foul shots, Hill being the other Harding scorer with three points. Lewis, Bernlohr, and Braun also tallied for Bexley and the game ended after Harding missed several attempts to break into the scoring column again.

By The Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich., Dec. 7—Charley Bachman's 13 years service as head football coach at Michigan State college was at an end today. The Spartan mentor, object of considerable criticism during the past year as his eleven had an in-and-out season, resigned last night.

McMillen Cagers Book Game Here with House of David

McMillen Feed Mill's all-conquering cagers will test their skill against the House of David bearded quintet, Sunday, Dec. 15 at the Armory, Roy N. Lovett, the plant personnel director, announced today. Game time is 2:30 p. m.

The locals, who have won 28 consecutive league games in the last two years of Y. M. C. A. loop play, will meet the touring House of David outfit in what is billed as a basketball three-ring circus.

The visitors are representatives of the nearly independent Michigan religious sect founded some years ago by King Ben Purnell who called himself the second Messiah. They feature trick shots, clever ball handling and some outright clowning.

Long shot specialist is Bill Steinecke who has played baseball with the Yankees, Tigers and Pirates. Ham Hamilton, who manages the aggregation, holds the world's record for consecutive games played without a minute's rest. High scorer of the team is Bordon Burgett who stands six feet three inches tall. Paul Short specializes in clever ball handling. He set a conference scoring record while playing at the University of California.

At center is Big Tom Faulkner who weighs 225 pounds and stands six feet seven inches tall.

McMillen's squad consists of Gene Shellhorn, Mickey Ferrin, Elmer Busler, Roy Everly, Don Flesher, Gene Lehner and Dick McCurdy.

Tiffin junior college won easily 68-46 at Fort Wayne, Ind., against Concordia junior college, coasting through the second half from a 34-18 advantage. Over Tolsen's eight field goals and four free throws were the game's best individual scoring mark.

Doubleheaders Pit Buckeyes Against 4 High-Scoring Outfits.

By The Associated Press

CINCINNATI, Dec. 7 — Ohio opposes Kentucky to add the extra touch as four high-scoring teams from the neighbor states provide the fire works tonight in the inaugural of a series of college basketball doubleheaders at Music Hall sports arena.

In the opener, Akron, which whipped Mount Union, 67-45, in its debut the other night, meets Eastern Kentucky State Teachers, defending champions of the fast Kentucky Intercollegiate Athletic conference. It will be the Teachers' first game of the season but they boast virtually the same team which copped the KIAC title last year, scoring 1,459 points.

The nightcap sends the University of Cincinnati against the University of Kentucky, whose Wildcats won 28 of 30 games last season and annexed the National Invitational Tournament in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Kentucky has bowled over three foes with comparative ease this year while U. C. opened its season last week with a 85-64 victory over Kentucky Wesleyan.

The parade of star performers will include Akron's Fritz Nagy, who collected 549 points in the 1944-45 season before he went into service; U. C.'s Al Rubenstein, sophomore from Brooklyn who shoots from anywhere on the floor, and a long list of U. K luminaries — Alex Groza, Bob Brannum, Wally (Wah-Wah) Jones and Ralph Beard, to mention a few.

DURING HIS HITCH in the Navy, Charlie Sokol made the all-Southern quintet while sailering at University of North Carolina. Back in civies, he'll bolster the William and Mary varsity.

Martel grabbed an early lead and was on top 15 to 12 at the intermission and led at the three quarter mark 25 to 17 but Morral put on the final drive netting 18 points in the last stanza to 8 for Martel.

Charles Mayers, high scoring forward of last year who hold the single game record with 40 points, tallied 19 in last night's romp.

Booming Bowl Business Begins In Toledo Glass Game Today

By The Associated Press

TOLEDO, O., Dec. 7 — Football's booming bowl business gets under way today with the Bobcats of Bates college, Lewiston, Me., meeting the Rockets of Toledo university in the first edition of an annual extravaganza billed as the Glass Bowl.

It's the first offering in a series of post-season bowl contests scheduled across the nation between this fifth anniversary of Pearl Harbor and the New Year.

It pits an undefeated and untied Bates eleven against twice-tied and twice-beaten Toledo and is certain to draw a capacity crowd of 14,000, assuring the eastern invaders an approximate $9,000 take from the gate.

The Toledoans, on the basis of post-time figuring, were established as favorites, even though the teams have played no common foes, and there is no basis for comparison. The Ohioans weighed in at an aerage of 201 pounds, and the Bates boys at 186.

Both coaches, Raymond (Duck) Pond of Bates and Bill Orwig of Toledo, had prayed for good weather to favor their vaunted passing attacks, and the weatherman's prediction was "fair and warmer."

Youngsters Take Lesson At Miami Golf Tourney

By The Associated Press

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 7—The youngsters who were supposed to take over the golf game once the war was over were taking lessons today from a couple of veterans, both of the game and the war, as Miami's $10,000 Open Golf Tournament entered the third round.

Out in front by two strokes with 131 was Sammy Snead of Hot Springs, Va., who is all of 34 years old, while his hottest competitor was Jimmy DeMaret, of Houston, Tex., with 133, who also is about 34.

Ohio State Opens Defense Of Big Nine Cage Title Tonight

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 7—Ohio State university's Big Nine basketball champions open their season tonight at the Fairground Coliseum against Pitt seeking their 22nd consecutive home victory.

The Bucks haven't been beaten here since Feb. 4, 1944, and were favored against the Panthers whom they defeated twice last season.

A capacity attendance of 7,500 was expected to watch Coach W. H. H. (Tippy) Dye's debut as the Bucks' basketball mentor. For Coach H. C. (Doc) Carlson of Pitt, it will mark the start of his 25th year as Panther cage boss.

Les Pugh, a freshman who played for Middletown's 1944 state high school champions was the only member of the Bucks' starting lineup lacking varsity experience. The line-up, which averages six feet, 3.4 inches in height, also includes Bob Donham of Hammond, Ind., forward; Jack Underman of Columbus, center; and Capt. Paul Huston of Xenia and Bob Bowen of Martins Ferry, guards.

After tonight's game the Bucks go to the Pacific coast. Their games there with the University of Washington were rescheduled yesterday from Dec. 28 and 30 to Dec. 21 and 23.

L.A. WINTER BASEBALL MEETING ENDS TODAY

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 7—Baseball's annual winter meeting comes to a close today with club owners of the two major leagues convening in joint session with Commissioner A. B. Chandler to wind up a week of business that ran pretty true to expectations.

The minor leagues concluded their formal sessions late yesterday, concurring after an exchange of notes with the majors on a new major-minor agreement effective for five years starting Jan. 12, 1947.

Of particular interest on today's agenda was the resolution by the Pacific coast league asking recognition as a major league. Most observers were confident the petition would get a gentle but firm thumbsdown reply.

Both major circuits agreed that the Chicago Cubs will be the host club for the annual all-star game July 8, and left the lid off on the number of night games each club may play.

At the minors' request, the majors reduced from $7,500 to $6,000 the amount they could pay an athlete as extra reward for signing a contract. The scale also will permit a triple-A club to pay as much as $4,800, with a $3,000 limit for double-A clubs, $2,500 for A, $1,500 for B, $1,200 for C and $800 for D and E clubs.

LOCAL SCHOOL GROUP AT BUCYRUS MEETING

Ohio Educational Conference Held in Crawford Co.

A group of Marion city and county teachers and school superintendents, including E. E. Holt and D. T. Mills, city and county schools superintendents, respectively, today attended a regional conference sponsored by the Ohio Education Association at Bucyrus.

The meeting was to discuss What Will Ohio Do For Her Schools in 1947? Marion Harmon, superintendent of Crawford county schools, presided. Cards and educational letters from Crawford, Wyandot, Richland, Marion and Morrow counties were present.

Recommendations made recently by the OEA regarding financial operation of Ohio schools were discussed.

The recommendations included the following:

"1. Increase basic state support from $44 to an average of $55 for each Ohio public school.

"2. Broaden the state foundation program to equalize educational facilities by raising the minimum support "level from $66.50 to an average $106 per pupil in average daily membership."

The recommendations would make possible an estimated average salary of $2,250 for teachers in any school district. The average salary of Ohio teachers now is $2,010.

If the OEA recommendations for additional state aid were put into effect, this is the estimated amount of aid city school districts in this area and in cities in Marion's population class would receive (present aid in parenthesis): Marion, $421,532 ($244,215); Bucyrus, $86,651 ($61,686), Delaware, $133,990 ($89,416), Galion, $116,855 ($71,460), Kenton, $109,824 ($66,610), Mansfield, $399,511 ($279,999), Mt. Vernon $150,290 ($95,855); Newark, $392,421 ($208,764); Sandusky $203,687 ($157,518); Shelby, $111,842 ($79,900); Steubenville, $262,378 ($206,323), Tiffin $105,556 ($81,081); Ada, $54,534 ($39,335), Carey $67,107 ($41,849); Crestline $53,901 ($35,292), Marysville $63,371 ($42,151); Mt. LOVE'S FAIR HORIZON

By ADELE GARRISON

"YOU Sharles Kent!" the pseudo "Mr. X." snarled, the gutturals in his voice sounding now in his baffled rage, "you keep your mouth shut if you know what is goot for you!

"These fools have me temporarily, they have my three men, but do you think they can brave the great machine of which I am a part? Remember, men are watching your home, and if I do not get back on time, you will not like to see what is left of your wife and child."

There was the sound of another smart slap, expertly given, and I saw Harry Underwood look ruefully at the palm of his hand, as the prisoner gave another snarl of rage and pain.

No Sympathy Wasted

The blood was oozing from the corners of his mouth, but I knew no one in the room was wasting any sympathy on him.

"De Good Lawd, he knows I don't like hitting a man whose hands are bound," Harry said, "but there doesn't seem to be any other way to make this particular swine keep his snout shut. But I think I'll have to go in for brass knuckles. That last one hurt me as much as it did him, as the Victorian papas used to tell their kids when they were laying on the hickory switches.

"But don't make any mistakes, Fritz, or whatever your name is," he warned the prisoner. "There are plenty more wallops packed in this old right of mine, and you'll get the doubled fist the next time you make a crack like the last one. Sorry, Chief; I shouldn't take up your time explaining things to this ham actor."

Enjoyed the Explanations

"I've enjoyed listening to your—explanations—vocal and physical—" my father said, smiling. "And now, we'll hear from Charlie."

He turned to the taxi driver who was looking contemptuously at the prisoner.

"Has he any men watching your home?" he asked.

"I'm pretty sure not," Charlie Kent answered, "but of course, you never can tell.—But we ought to get back to our place on the double quick, to save the real 'Mr. X.' from blinking out."

My father went into action characteristically.

"You can tell us what happened while we're getting started," he said. "You have your taxi with you?"

Charlie Kent nodded.

"Yes, and full of gas and oil," he said.

"How many will it hold?"

"Six ordinarily, ten or twelve if necessary."

"Good! Your trunk is empty?"

Easily Emptied

"I can empty it in two minutes, and leave the stuff here if necessary."

"Fine. Now does 'Mr. X.' need a doctor and a nurse?"

"He sure does, and anything surgical or medical they can bring along. That swine over there and his pals buried him alive."

I rarely have seen my father startled from his iron composure, but his ejaculation, "Good God!" was as emphatic as the same words from the lips of "Mr. K.," of Harry Underwood and of Jim. I gave a horrified gasp and Katie's screech, quickly smothered by her hand clapped over her mouth, went unreproved.

"We haven't time to hear about it now," my father said. "But tell me one thing, where is 'Mr. X.' now?"

In a Tool Chest

"In a tool closet at the back of my garage," Charlie said. "I didn't dare let Bertha know he was there. She couldn't have done anything for him anyway. I did what I could for him, and it's fifty-fifty whether he'll be alive or dead when we get there."

"Attention, everybody," my father snapped. "Charlie, get out to your car, empty the trunk, and bring the car up to this side door, headed toward the road.

"Jim, get that folding stretcher and blankets and put them in the trunk. Leave the door open so that anything else necessary can be put in. Margaret, get your hat and coat on, and ask Katharine what you can do to help her get ready. 'K.,' you will go along with us. But Harry, old friend, I shall have to ask you to take over here. Come with me now to get Dr. Twitchell and Katharine."
